

Japanese Language Quick Reference Sheets *****

Here are several useful sentences with their Japanese translation. If you like, print them out and bring to Japan, and show them in case you have any difficulty in communicating in English. If you want to speak the Japanese sentences in the parentheses, pronounce them using only five vowels;

"a" is always pronounced as "u" in "cut"

"e" is always pronounced as "e" in "set"

"i" is always pronounced as "i" in "pick"

"o" is always pronounced as "o" in "oil"

"u" is always pronounced as "oo" in "book"

Double vowels are just the combination of the above, for example, "ue" is just "u" plus "e" above like "oo-e(nd)", not like "you." Long vowel like "ea" in "eat" is expressed as "ih". So, "Yukarigaoka" is pronounced like "You-cu(t)-li(nk)-gu(n)-o(il)-co(me)." "r" is rather "l" than "r" of English.

Excuse me.
